Presenter Bio

Calum Harvey-Scholes is an Australian-based energy policy researcher specialising in electrification, community energy systems, and governance. His work at Rewiring Australia places him at the centre of Australia's household-level electrification transition, particularly through the Electrify 2515 pilot. His background blends academic research, policy design, and hands-on technical experience in retrofit technologies.

Presentation Precs

Calum Harvey Scholes from Rewiring Australia explores how households are becoming active participants in the clean energy transition. Through solar power, home batteries, electric vehicles, and electrification, Australians are transforming from passive energy consumers into energy generators, creating a cleaner, more affordable, and more resilient energy future.
